A short program is to be given during the hours and refreshments will be served in the cafeteria. Assisting the members in receiving will be Mrs. J. H. Hauberg, Mrs. C. W. Mrs. C. A. Schoessel, Mrs. W. J. W. and Mrs. C. A. Schaefer.

Welcome Home and Farewell Reception.

A reception will be given tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock at the Oak Grove United Presbyterian church for Miss Elizabeth McMillen, who leaves her connection with the church, and for Rev. J. L. Vance, who takes up his work as acting pastor of the congregation, the affair being a farewell for the former and a welcome home for the latter.

Rev. Mr. Vance has recently returned from France, where he has been for more than a year engaged in Y. M. C. A. work. He has taken up his new duties at the Oak Grove church and his many friends will be glad of this occasion to give him a hearty welcome on his safe arrival home.

While there will be general rejoicing over the home-coming of Rev. Mr. Vance there will be genuine sadness and regret over the departure of Miss McMillen, who leaves next Monday for Columbus, Ohio, to attend the general meeting of the United Presbyterian Women's Missionary society. She will then visit in Michigan and at her home in Denver, Colo., and in August will take up her work as matron of a dormitory for girls at Frenchburg, Ky. For more than three years Miss McMillen has labored faithfully and earnestly at the Oak Grove and Gloria Dei churches and she has become acquainted with hundreds of people and endeared herself in their hearts.

A short program will be presented and will be followed by a social time, the affair being open to the general public.

EMPERESS EUGENIE 93 YRS. OLD TODAY

London, May 5.—A special courier journeyed to Farnborough hill today bearing greetings from King George and Queen Mary to the empress Eugenie, on the occasion of the latter's 93rd birthday. The ex-empress, who has been spoken of by recent writers as "the most wonderful woman of her age," as well as "the most tragic figure in modern history," is reported to be in good health for one of her years. Those who have been privileged to meet Eugenie during the past year declare that while physically she is suffering from the infirmities of her great age, mentally she appears to be as keen as in the days of long ago when she played a stellar role in the affairs of France and of Europe.

Whenever the weather permits Eugenie takes a daily walk in the woods and park surrounding her home—Farnborough hill, although situated within sight of the great military camp at Aldershot, is one of the quietest places in England, and the little community of exiles which surrounds the ex-empress lives in quiet seclusion among a forest of pines. Visitors to the place are few in number, for of late years the life of Eugenie has become one of almost absolute seclusion.

In the grounds at Farnborough are the tombs of Eugenie's husband, Napoleon III, and her son, the prince imperial, who met death while fighting with the British troops in the Zulu war, the bodies having been transferred from Chislehurst, where Napoleon and Eugenie first took up their residence when forced to flee from France to England.

The Bonapartes, who look after the spiritual need of the household and guard the tombs, have a church and priory at Farnborough, built by Eugenie at a total cost of more than half a million dollars. On either side of the high altar of the church are granite sarcophagi containing the remains of Napoleon III and the prince imperial. When in the course of time the ex-empress comes to die she will be interred in an arcosolium which has already been built into the wall of the church, behind the altar and over the great stone door leading into the monastery.
